London's Towering Inferno

Over the past few weeks the people in England have endured more than their fair share of disasters that have affected the lives of so many people! The deliberate targeted bombing at a concert in Manchester, the ISIS road rage on London Bridge and Borough Market and now this terrible fire that has killed many and displaced hundreds of families from their high rise living.

Our prayers and thoughts go out to all affected by this most recent tragedy. Through such darkness and sad times it is amazing to hear the stories of human bravery and generosity from all quarters of society! People love to give and share what they can to help lift the spirits of those directly affected! Christian love for sisters and brothers in need abound in a healthy society when times of trouble occur. This is a lovely response which should not go unrecognised when human suffering is present. Our challenge today is to care for our neighbours before tragedy occurs. Michael Reflection: As if the Church were not satisfied with fifty days of paschal feasting, the festivals continue beyond the season. First the Holy Trinity is honoured, and now the Body and Blood of Christ. Many still know today's feast by its shorter Latin name, Corpus Christi.

This observance originated in the Belgian city of Liège in the 13th century. Very soon after, in 1264, Pope Urban IV decreed that the feast be celebrated by the whole Western Church. From then until the reforms of the Second Vatican Council the popular focus of the feast was on the presence of Christ in the consecrated bread, the Blessed Sacrament.

Nowadays the feast invites us to enter into the whole mystery of Jesus' self-gift to us in the eucharistic meal. We are reminded that the eucharist is first and foremost an action that engages us heart and soul. Our communion in the Body and Blood of Christ makes the Church the Body of Christ. Like Jesus we break the bread and pour out the wine of our lives for the sake of the world.

A leading American theologian argues that Pope Francis' distinctive vision of the Church as 'the pilgrim people of God' underpins his reforms / BY BRADFORD E. HINZE

Listening to the Spirit

THE NUMBER of Catholics who remember that Pope John XXIII opened the Second Vatican Council by praying for a new outpouring of the Spirit in the Church is dwindling. That was in 1962. For over twenty years afterwards many believed that this new Pentecost was coming. This was due in no small part to the council's recovery of a biblical vision of the Church as a pilgrim people of God, with each of its members anointed by the Spirit at baptism to become an active participant in Jesus Christ's prophetic, priestly, and kingly roles. A closely related insight was the reclamation of the collegial role of bishops, who accompany and lead this people on their journey.

In the heady decades after the council, these newly-rediscovered teachings about the nature of the Church inspired myriad reforms. The concept of collegiality inspired the recovery of the ancient idea of the synod of bishops, where representatives of local churches would gather to deliberate and make decisions about the issues facing the universal church. Collegiality also accelerated the development of national and regional episcopal conferences. The vision of the Church as the people of God also provided the catalyst for much greater engagement in ecclesial life and mission by lay men and women: their expanded participation in parish councils, in diocesan councils and synods, in lay pastoral, liturgical, and formation ministries, their embrace of the study of theology, and their assumption of leadership roles in works of mercy and in campaigning for justice. It was an exciting period of renewal and experimentation, of partnership and of growth. It was exhilarating; often untidy, and sometimes a little frightening. There were mistakes of taste and of judgement. But, for many Catholics, this was the Holy Spirit at work.

NOT EVERYONE, however, shared this enthusiasm. The election of Karol Wojtyla as Pope John Paul II in 1978 and his choice of Joseph Ratzinger as Prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith in 1981 coincided with increasing concerns being raised about people of God ecclesiology. Its critics laid a series of failings at its door: a declining sense of mystery in the Church, increasing secularisation, diminishing religious literacy, and more. John Paul II and Cardinal Ratzinger became determined advocates of a different model. A particular version of Communio ecclesiology – emphasising that the Church is a mystery and a sacrament – took shape in Roman circles. Of course, there is no one

"model" of the Church: it is the people of God, it is a communion, it is the mystical body of Christ – and much more. No one model exhausts the meaning of the Church; the interplay between them gives life to the Church. But the purposeful suffocation of people of God ecclesiology was to lead to the restoration of centralised curial authority and the return of a more paternalistic clergy. Over the next thirty years, official Church documents and policies increasingly circumscribed the exercise of collegial authority by the bishops. Synods became exercises in the rubber stamping of documents prepared in advance by the Roman curia, and gradually stifled the emergence of a theologically mature laity, active in church ministry and mission.

Since his election in March 2013, Pope Francis has undertaken a remarkable reversal of this three-decade trend. We are witnessing an astonishing new springtime for people of God ecclesiology. Francis's first major interview as Pope, with the Jesuit Antonio Spodaro, and his apostolic exhortation Evangelii Gaudium, released two months later, signalled the change clearly. "The image of the church I like," Francis told Spadaro, "is that of the holy, faithful people of God. This is the definition I often use." Alluding to the Vatican Council's dogmatic constitution on the Church, Lumen Gentium, and its image of the people of God on their pilgrim journey, exercising their prophetic office by communicating their sense of the faith, Francis says: "When the dialogue among the people and the bishops and the pope goes down this road and is genuine, then it is assisted by the Holy Spirit."

Francis often returns to the image of the people of God; only rarely does he speak about the Church as communion. People of God ecclesiology provides the primary framework for Francis's vision of the Church. We can see this vision playing out in four key motifs, each of which contrasts sharply with the positions of John Paul II and Benedict XVI.

First, the Church as the people of God orients Francis's inclusive, missionary model of discipleship, which is marked by Spirit-compelled relationships of encounter, mercy, tenderness and healing with a weary, wounded world. As we read in Evangelii Gaudium: "In all the baptised, from first to last, the sanctifying power of the Spirit is at work, impelling us to evangelization."

SECOND, POPE FRANCIS champions a synodal church, in which the people of God "journey together", meeting face to face, and discerning the way forward in community. At the fiftieth anniversary of the synod of bishops, he emphasized: "A synodal Church is a Church which listens, which realizes that listening 'is more than simply hearing'. It is a mutual listening in which everyone has something to learn. The faithful people, the college of bishops, the Bishop of Rome: all listening to each other, and all listening to the Holy Spirit, the 'Spirit of truth' (John 14:17)." For Francis the Church must learn how to become synodal not only in the synod of bishops, but at all levels, in local churches and communities and in episcopal conferences. His advocacy of synodality throughout the Church is a hallmark of Francis's own self-understanding of his papal mission: "I am conscious of the need to promote a sound 'decentralisation'."

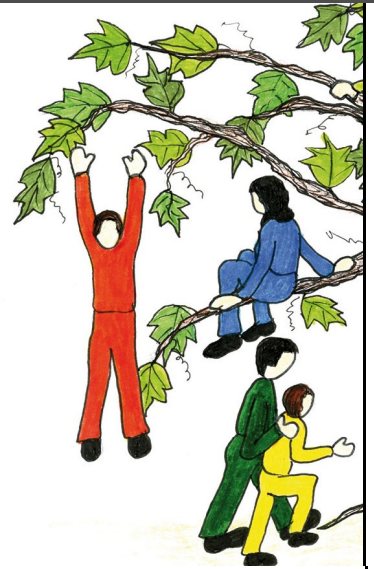

This synodal vision reflects Francis's conviction that the Spirit is at work in the life of the local Church, each rooted in a particular people and culture, each bringing a particular charism to enrich the universal church. He is receptive to granting bishops' conferences greater freedom to exercise their authority on pastoral issues in light of local circumstances and needs; in turn, he validates their authority by citing their teachings in his own.

Third, in marked contrast to the restrictions on freedom of enquiry often imposed by his predecessors, Francis encourages honest dialogue and debate. In synodal deliberations he has welcomed discussion of topics long regarded taboo, including the place of gay people in the Church, the inclusion of divorced

Melbourne Ordinations: On Saturday June 24 at St Patrick's Cathedral at 10am, the Archbishop will ordain Deacons Trevor Tibbertsma and Marcus Goulding to the priesthood. Also ordained will be Tho Tran as a Deacon preparing for priesthood. Hubert Fernando will be ordained as a permanent Deacon on this day as well. This is a time of great joy for the Church of Melbourne as we see the Lord blessing our local Church with the gift of Holy Orders.

All are welcome to the Ordination Mass at the cathedral. Please pray for these men, and for many more vocations from our local community. God continues to call young people to serve – our prayers help them to respond. Pray daily for vocations.

THIS WEEK'S GOSPEL—John 6: 51-58

Jesus said to the Jews:

'I am the living bread which has come down from heaven. Anyone who eats this bread will live for ever; and the bread that I shall give is my flesh, for the life of the world.'

Then the Jews started arguing with one another: 'How can this man give us his flesh to eat?' they said.

Jesus replied:

'I tell you most solemnly, if you do not eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood, you will not have life in you.

Anyone who does eat my flesh and drink my blood has eternal life, and I shall raise him up on the last day.

For my flesh is real food and my blood is real drink.

He who eats my flesh and drinks my blood lives in me and I live in him.

As I, who am sent by the living Father, myself draw life from the Father, so whoever eats me will draw life from me.

This is the bread come down from heaven; not like the bread our ancestors ate: they are dead, but anyone who eats this bread will live for ever.'

Lord, we commend to you people in need:

Those who are sick:
